STATE FUNDS FOR SCHOOLS

MUCH ado has been made about a tentative proposition to secure the use of State funds for the building of schools throughout Nevada and it has been openly charged that all parties have been neglectful of their duty to the people of this State by permitting State funds to be diverted to the advancement of State interests east, west, north and south while Nevada was begging eastern capital for money to build school houses.

The crime against domestic interests is not alone admitted but the offense is one that is on the way to an early remedy. The legislatures of 1911 and 1913 took the matter under advisement in the twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth sessions with the result that a constitutional amendment was prepared for submission to voters at the next general election looking to the employment of State surplus school funds at home. This measure had to receive the approval of two sessions of the legislature before submission to the popular will. The preliminary stages have passed and there can be no doubt the amendment will receive the proper majority. This will bring the subject before the next legislature, which will be entrusted with enacting laws for the safeguarding of such investments to prevent reckless dissipation of a sacred trust. Under our present constitution school funds have to be invested in securities of other States where the average rate of interest has not exceeded three and one-half per cent, while home borrowers were compelled to go into the open market and pay as high as eight per cent for the use of money that properly belonged at home. In other words, bankers holding blocks of bonds issued elsewhere could sell these securities to Nevada by paying a small rate of interest and then lend the same money back to Nevada schools and municipalities for double the rate paid for the use of the money. By this measure, fathered by both Democrats and Republicans, it is proposed to introduce an era of cheap money at home for the benefit of community interests. Primarily the amendment was offered with the one thought that the schools would be the chief beneficiary and the effect will be to reduce the cost of construction and enable school trustees a wider scope in their operations.

Would be reformers with less than academic knowledge of State affairs have incorporated in their platform this suggestion that has already been adopted and carried by both old parties. There could not be any dispute over the legitimacy of the movement to utilize State funds and there was no opposition. After the amendment carries it is incumbent on the lawmakers to see that school funds are not recklessly administered and that the principal is not jeopardized by any false sentimentality arising from consideration of local interests.

Therefore for the information of voters it will be seen that there is no novelty about a proposition that was started on its way to fruition five years ago and one that rests with the voters this fall if they want to see it applied.

It is said that the air castles of Utopia should be shattered in this simple manner, but it is true, and all the arguments at the command of visionary theorists cannot disturb the serenity of the situation.

NEVADA SPUDS THE BEST.

NEVADA potatoes have taken a slump and yet this market is filled with spuds from California that are nothing in comparison with the home raised product. Oregon and Washington growers are unloading their surplus in Nevada and the Nevada farmer is deprived of the support of his own market owing to the operations of commission houses controlling the refrigerator car service who prefer to bring in low priced tubers of inferior quality rather than buy the Nevada product which cannot be beat by any other State in the Union. Just to show what the Nevada potato is the Bonanza is at liberty to state the opinion of a group of millionaires whose homes are among the best on Long Island Sound. Recently one of them received 100 pounds of potatoes from Mason Valley and the encomiums lavished on the gift indicates what may be done by a proper marketing system. These men want the best of every commodity and they are willing to pay the price. When the shipment from Nevada was received the consignee invited a number of friends to dinner without saying anything of the special treat prepared for their delectation. The potatoes were the piece de resistance of the repast and after the coffee was served the guests instantly began inquiring about the spuds. Their delicate taste had instantly detected the superior quality of the commodity and they wanted to know more about it and where their hosts succeeded in picking them up. They thought they were being regaled with a hothouse product from the gardens of their entertainer and eagerly sought advice and information. When they heard the facts they were thunderstruck and at once begged the favor of a small portion of the priceless tubers to take home to show their families what they were missing. Never had they touched such mealy potatoes that simply melted in the mouth without the slightest suspicion of the watery, sickening mess they had been buying from the best truck gardeners of the sound. Even the much vaunted Canadian potato from Prince Edward Island could not compare with the Nevada article. The treat aroused so much interest that the diners took occasion to express themselves in the most enthusiastic terms and were not satisfied until made acquainted with the circumstances. Before parting the guests requested their host to thank the man in Tonopah whose foresight was responsible for a potato banquet fit for Lucullus, and placed orders for additional potato shipments by express.

This is only an intimation of what can be done by organizing and looking for the right kind of a market. Properly sorted stock will command the highest prices and next year when the Panama canal is open for business shipments can be made by that route at a fraction of the present cost. In any event there will be a reduction in cost of refrigerator service and, if Moapa cantaloupes can be sent to the Waldorf before they are seen and tasted in Salt Lake there should not be any bar to shipments of Nevada spuds to the Atlantic coast.

Wilson cracked the whip and the timid followers of the administration hastened to cover by voting as the president dictated on the repeal of the toll exemption clause of the Panama canal regulations. Wilson claimed the Sims bill would pass by a majority of 100 votes and the report shows he was only five short of the count. The appointive power is a great institution and the big stick is not unknown to the anemic schoolmaster who is playing with the serious question of international politics.

Cage up the eagle and stoop to be branded with the British lion. This is the lion's day to howl and he is making the world ring with his exultation. The noble animal is having a feast of rich red juicy American blood for breakfast food this glorious morning.

It looks as though Canada had annexed the Panama canal and that Uncle Sam will be nothing more than a janitor with the privilege of paying the bills. But what is going to be done with the fortifications?

Three years of weary watchful waiting and then—a change at the White House.
